3. It was announced that Suzanne Gregoire had been called to a position in the Brussels Federation.
4. Four new members were welcomed, and the "hommes de confiance" were urged to recruit additional new members by the next General Assembly meeting. One member, Alexis Stasse, asked if seven policemen who wished to join the Party would be acceptable. Gregoire and Haest asked that the policemen's names be furnished, so an investigation could be made to discover if they were potential spies.

5. The schedule for various meetings was reviewed. "Hommes de confiance" would meet every two weeks; group leaders would see their "hommes de confiance" each week; the Section Committee would meet weekly; and the General Assembly would convene every two months.
